A large group of beautiful flowering evergreen shrubs. They require lime-free soil. Plant with ericaceous compost, garden compost or peat and top dress annually with bark chippings. Best on moist but well drained soil. Ideal for woodland sites, in partial shade. Most of the varieties listed flower in May – June.

Dead flowers and stalks should be removed immediately after flowering – this will promote next season's flower buds and improve the appearance. No pruning is needed, but if required to improve shape this should be done in April or after flowering.

LIME TOLERANT RHODODENDRONS

For customers who would love to grow Rhododendrons, but lack the acid soil required to keep them healthy, we now stock a range of Rhododendrons grafted onto lime-tolerant rootstocks.

Care is simple, but as with any shrub, the soil must be well prepared. We suggest digging in plenty of organic matter, such as composted bark, ericaceous compost, garden compost or peat. Keep the plant moist while establishing and feed regularly with an ericaceous fertilizer such as Miracle-Gro Ericaceous.

Stock availability varies from season to season, but we have a good selection of varieties.

CAMELLIAS

These magnificent flowering evergreens are almost without parallel in the garden. The glossy green leaves are beautiful throughout the year and the large, well-shaped flowers are spectacular in late winter and early spring.

Camellias are a woodland plant needing a partially shaded site, preferably out of early morning sun. Cold winds can be damaging, but they are suitable for a sheltered north-facing wall.

Soil should be lime free. When planting, add plenty of ericaceous compost, garden compost or peat and mulch annually with bark chippings. They are suitable for pots or tubs - use Ericaceous compost. Feed annually with an ericaceous fertiliser during the growing season. Can also be grown in a greenhouse or conservatory during the flowering period. Little pruning is needed - reduce any straggling shoots in April. We recommend that young and container grown plants are given protection during cold winter spells.

A full range of varieties is available in autumn and spring.
